Italy records more than 200 avian flu outbreaks in poultry

8 other nations in the region also register cases in commercial birds

With more than 200 confirmed outbreaks of highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) in poultry, Italy continues to be the European country most affected by the disease this winter. However, eight more nations in the region have also officially registered further cases in commercial birds.

Avian Influenza in Poland

Europe is facing more outbreaks of avian influenza in recent weeks. This problem affects not only Germany, Great Britain, Belgium and the Netherlands, but also Poland. The beginning of the year, more outbreaks of avian influenza (bird flu) appear in Poland. This time, in Greater Poland Voivodeship, in Kielciny (90 km from Poznań), avian influenza appeared on the farm where over 620 000 hens were kept.

In Poland in 2021, 348 outbreaks of avian influenza were detected, of which 339 in the spring and summer period.

A França abateu de 600 mil a 650 mil frangos, patos e outras aves no mês passado, em uma corrida para conter o vírus da gripe aviária que ameaça se tornar o quarto grande surto no país desde 2015. O Ministério da Agricultura relatou aglomerados de vírus em 26 fazendas industriais, principalmente no sudoeste - lar da lucrativa indústria francesa de patê de foie gras -, bem como 15 casos em aves selvagens e três em currais.

Avian flu in poultry reported by 7 Asian states

At least three avian influenza serotypes have been reported

During the latter part of December, seven Asian countries have registered new outbreaks of highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) in poultry. Not only are outbreaks occurring widely across the continent from the Middle East to the Pacific, at least three different virus serotypes are involved. China has reported a further...
